The four sessions in this two-day course are designed to improve the leadership effectiveness of federal employees. Presented and led by Jerry Strom, creator of the highly popular 'Six Core Competencies of Leadership' training series, this class builds essential leadership skills associated with OPM's recommended 'Executive Core Qualifications' for leadership. Incorporating recent surveys and research within the federal sector, you'll improve business acumen, the capacity to lead change, lead people, drive results, and build coalitions.

Day One. [Think.]

The Force of Impact: How You Can Apply a Double Standard of Thinking that Improves Your Effectiveness.

Morning Session: "Strategic Thinking." Having a logical, process-driven learning mindset is essential for navigating into the future – making tough decisions, setting goals, initiating change, allocating resources, and improving your organization's performance.

Afternoon Session: "Creative, Innovative, and Adaptive Thinking." Accomplishing the strategic initiatives, goals, and mission of the agency is dramatically improved when imaginative, thought-provoking ideas are used as a catalyst to see work accomplished in new ways, with new focus, clarity, and energy.

Day Two. [Act.]

The Point of Impact: Understanding the W.O.W. Factor between Leadership and Relationships.

Morning Session: "Social / Emotional Intelligence for Leadership." Your effectiveness as a leader is determined by behaviors that elicit positive responses in others. Assess your strengths, and learn how to improve the impact of your approach.

Afternoon Session: "The Interactions that Determine Your Impact." A 'W.O.W.' Factor is always in play when working with others – fully understanding the primary wants and needs that people have while following the leader. See what the research identifies about successful interactions with others.
